Says $500,000,000 Bond Issue To Be Sold By May

Subscriptions amounting to $101,647,300 for the State of Israel bonds have been received since the flotation was started in the U.S. May 1, it was reported by Henry Morgenthau Jr., chairman of the board of governors of the State of Israel Bond Issue. He said cash received as of last December 31, was $54,000,000.

Addressing 200 U.S. communal leaders at a meeting in New York, of the board at the Pierre Hotel to map the 1952 bond program, Mr. Morgenthau said 287,000 persons have bought Israeli bonds. He expressed confidence the full $500,000,000 issue would be sold by May 1, 1954.

Mr. Morgenthau termed the results of the bond drive "the most dramatic testimony of the warm friendship between America and Israel," representing a "growing confidence in the economic potential of Israel as well as of a highly organized sales effort which has enlisted any army of many thousands of volunteers throughout the country."

The bond chairman who returned from Israel, said he had seen "forceful evidence of the fact that the Israel Bond issue has already become the backbone of Israel's economic growth." He said new economic explorations in Israel last year had done "much to explode the fallacy that Israel is poor in natural resources."

Julius B. Vanezky, chairman of the executive committee, who presided, said the drive had "in a very short time impressed all Americans with the investment possibilities of [illegible] democracy in the Middle [illegible] chamber also paid [illegible] of Israel Bonds, [illegible] $101,647,300 [illegible]

In a message to the conference, Eliezer Kaplan, Israel's Minister of Finance, expressed "very deep appreciation of the energy, vision and resources which have gone into the creation of the Israel Bond Issue," adding that the funds already made available were "giving new strength into the economic structure of Israel."

He said the "pressure on our facilities for power, transportation, irrigation, mining and the host of other industrial and agricultural requirements calls for a faster tempo of capital investment."

Once Official Of Austria, Receives Award As Educator

The title of professor emeritus was conferred on Dr. Richard Schuller, 81-year-old Austrian statesman and educator, after a luncheon in his honor at the New School for Social Research, 66 West Twelfth Street, in New York.

Dr. Schuller, who is retiring from active teaching, has been a member of the school's faculty since 1940. He fled from his native Austria in 1938, after Gestapo activities had convinced him he was marked for extermination. Then 68, he climbed a 9,000-foot mountain to cross the border into Merano, Italy.

In forty years service in the Austrian foreign ministry prior to his escape, Dr. Schuller had established an international reputation as a negotiator and scholar. Among the posts he had held were those of director general for economic affairs and under secretary for foreign affairs, says the New York Times.

Among those at the luncheon were Frau Schuller, 72, who preceded him in flight to Italy, and one of his three daughters, Mrs. Ilse Mintz, an assistant professor of economics at Columbia University. A second daughter, Mrs. Hilda Kurz, lives in London, and the third, Signora Susi Pirolo, lives in Rome.

Alvin Johnson, president emeritus of the New School, and Dr. Hans Simons, its president, praised the scholarly qualities and youthful vigor of Dr. Schuller. In reply Dr. Schuller, who appeared over 60 [illegible] said he felt [illegible] perhaps for a light waltz, but not for the hard work of [illegible]

Israel To Deal With Germans On Claims

The Israeli Government received a green light from the Knesset (Parliament) to "act in the matter of reparations from Germany in accordance with the needs of the hour". The cabinet now is expected to take up Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's offer to discuss Israel's claim for $1,000,000,000 reparations from Western Germany for non-identifiable Jewish property despoiled and plundered by the Nazis.

The brake that the Knesset put on the government, when it delegated the foreign affairs committee to determine the final line of action, was released by the pro-government majority in the committee to allow the government to take suitable action, says the New York Times.

The foreign affairs committee was told by Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett that the negotiations with Western Germany would not lead to the development of diplomatic, economic or social relations. He disclosed that German representatives would not be permitted to enter Israel and the Israelis would not be sent into Germany. Israeli negotiators would not be of ministerial level or top officials. The Israeli consulate in Munich would be closed if the occupying powers withdraw and Germany gets full sovereignty, Mr. Sharett said.

The fact that the issue concerns only the unidentifiable property of Jews who perished and left no heirs was underscored at Tel Aviv when a spokesman for the Jewish Agency disclosed it had received 20,000,000 marks, (approximately $4,762,000) from various German [illegible] as restitution [illegible] Jewish property [illegible] money [illegible] for trade.

The spokesman said the Agency and the American Joint Distribution Committee, who are leading the fight for restitution, expected to get another 120,000,000 marks. It was also stated that 200,000,000 marks had been paid as personal restitution to Jews in the United States zone of Germany and that 30,000,000 marks of this reached Israel.

A Herut motion for a national plebiscite on the question of negotiations with Western Germany was voted down.

Menachem Begin, head of the extreme right-wing nationalist Herut party, had said in an interview with the New York Times that he was bending all his energies toward bringing about a plebiscite on the question whether Israel should engage in direct negotiations with Germany for reparations.

Several weeks ago a mob protesting the Government's intention to negotiate with the Germans, stoned the Knesset (Parliament) after Mr. Begin had addressed the demonstrations in Jerusalem. Some 200 persons were injured and 400 arrested. Of those arrested, all but nineteen have been released.

Former leader of the terrorist Irgun Zvai Leumi, Mr. Begin had said that if the majority of the nation should approve Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's policy of negotiating with Germany, he would respect the decision. He was convinced, however, that the "overwhelming majority of our people are against the revolting abomination of negotiations with Germany and taking blood money from those who murdered millions of our father's children, brothers and sisters."

Mr. Begin recalled how the Nazis killed his father. They threw him and other Jews into the river at Brest-Litovsk and then machine-gunned those who tried to save themselves.

Reminded of his threat after the Knesset riot that if the Government went ahead with negotiations he would "not hesitate to issue a call to take up arms and fight it out," Mr. Begin explained this would apply only if the Government acted on the basis of the "artificial majority" of eleven it won in the Knesset.

He said the majority was artificial because many of the Mapai and religious party members who in their hearts were against the negotiations had been forced to vote with the Government by "Ben-Gurion's threats of disciplinary action." In addition, some Arab members of the Knesset who were "not concerned with this purely Jewish affair" had voted with the Government.

This situation, Mr. Begin said, would make negotiations with

Sees German Pay To Israel As Tainted Money

Israel should not negotiate with Germany to reclaim the property of Jews slain by the Nazis, but all nations should collect the reparations and use the money to fight discrimination, Rabbi Joseph H. Lookstein said at Congregation Kehilath Jeshurun, 125 E. 85th Street, New York.

Discussing a topic which has caused wide disagreement among Jews in Israel and throughout the world, Rabbi Lookstein argued that Israel alone should not accept any payment. The administration of Israeli Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion has favored accepting reparations as a debt justly owed to Israel which will assist Israel economically. The government's stand evoked riots outside the Knesset (Parliament).

"Shall Israel negotiate with Germany in order to reclaim the millions, if not billions, of dollars of hairless property which formerly belonged to Jews and Jewish community organizations?" Rabbi Lookstein said. "To understand the meaning of that question one must remember that the original owners of that property are now the holy and martyred dead of the Jewish people. The souls of those tragic victims of crematoria and gas chambers should dictate the answer to that question. With them in mind the answer must be an emphatic and resounding 'no.'

"Does that mean that Germany should have its monetary debt to the Jew canceled? Indeed not. But the collector must not be the Jew. Nor shall the beneficiary be the Jew. For us that money is tainted with the blood of our [illegible] the collector be the [illegible] as its duly [illegible] and

Honour Rabbi, For 50 Years Minister

The congregation of Shaare Zedek Synagogue, 212 West Ninety-third Street in New York, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the ordination of the Rev. Dr. Elias L. Solomon and the thirtieth anniversary of his rabbinate at the synagogue, of which he is senior rabbi.

Rabbi Louis Finkelstein, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, was guest preacher. He based a commemorative sermon on the Golden Rule, commending Rabbi Solomon as "a great leader, having great devotion and great piety," together with "an unparalleled love for human beings."

Dr. Finkelstein cited the classic answer of Rabbi Hillel who, when challenged to sum up the teachings of the Torah while standing on one foot, recited the Golden Rule as being "the whole law: the rest is commentary." This summation, according to rabbinical teachings, was based on one of a number of religious laws in the Torah, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

The opening chapter of the Torah, said Dr. Finkelstein, referring to the biblical story of the Creation, "is not a lesson in geology; it is a lesson in morals." Discussing the creation of man in the image of God, he said that "if we go out of this synagogue and meet a man clothed in rags, he may not have had an opportunity in life, a chance to be educated, but he is our neighbor."

Dr. Finkelstein emphasized that faith in God was needed to achieve survival in trouble and that those who have such faith could overcome their difficulties, says the New York Times. "And when prosperity comes," he said, "we must take it with humility because it is a gift."

Rabbi Solomon was the guest of honour at a dinner that his congregation gave at the Waldorf-Astoria. The principal speaker was Prof. Abraham A. Neuman, president of Dropsie College, Philadelphia. Dr. Solomon is past president of the Synagogue Council of America, composed of representatives of Orthodox, Conservative and Reform Judaism, and of the Rabbinical Assembly of America, composed of Conservative rabbis. During World War II he was a member of the Selective Service panel on theological qualifications and was cited by President Truman.

Arabs Get U.N. Favor On Million Palestine Refugees, Properties

The Arab members of the United Nations won at least a temporary victory at Paris when the General Assembly's special Political Committee approved a resolution enlarging the Palestine Conciliation Commission and expressing the Assembly's regret that Arab refugees had not been readmitted to Israel.

Ironically, these features were inserted into a text drafted by Britain, France, Turkey and the United States. By the time the Committee had finished amending this draft it was so altered that its four original sponsors voted against it. The Soviet bloc joined the Western Powers and Israel in opposing the resolution.

Hence the question arises whether the features injected into the text can weather a vote in a meeting of the full General Assembly, where a two-thirds majority is required, says the New York Times. The amendment to enlarge the Commission from its present three members to seven was approved by the close margin of 24 to 22, with eleven nations abstaining.

The three countries [illegible] on the present members of the commission—France, Turkey and the United States—had joined with Britain in framing [illegible] that would have shifted [illegible] quarters of the Commission [illegible] York. The object was [illegible] that organ to go into [illegible] status pending the [illegible] of prospects for its [illegible] ailing Arab-Israeli [illegible]

Out of the [illegible] glomerate voting, the [illegible] the future headquarters [illegible] commission. In the [illegible] were Jerusalem, [illegible] defeated 28 to 27, [illegible]

Then the Western plan to shift it to New York produced a tie vote of 22 to 22 with eight abstentions. The resulting dilemma was not clarified. Some delegates said the Commission now could meet anywhere "except Jerusalem." Some said its previous mandate continued, requiring it to meet in Jerusalem. Others said it could decide its own course in the matter.

The final vote on the resolution as a whole was 43 to 13 with Sweden and Turkey abstaining. This division would provide the necessary margin for final approval in the Assembly, but before the text as a whole is voted upon paragraph by paragraph, the vote will eliminate parts that cannot command a two-thirds majority, according to the New York Times.

The January 15 action completed the special Political Committee's debate on the future of the Palestine Conciliation Commission. The Commission had reported that after three years of effort, it had been unable to make substantial progress toward achievement of its objectives. Statistics say that two out of every five diabetics are unaware that they have the disease. To be sure that there is no possibility of the disease becoming established, it is wise to have regular medical checkups, in which tests for disease will be given. Those who are overweight and over forty, should be particularly alert for symptom of diabetes.

Palestine Pioneers

BY BERTHA BURDANS, OF JERUSALEM, IN THE NEW STATESMAN AND NATION

One of the contemporary world's greatest citizens is credited with the perspicacious remark that the Jews are like all other peoples, only more so. Certainly some difficulties of our times are reflected in possibly their most acute form in Palestine. Surrounded by hostile neighbours, the tiny democracy of Israel is trying to defy all the laws of modern immigrant absorption, and maintain a democratic way of life, while swamping itself with immigrants themselves steeped in precisely that Levantine way of life, freedom from which distinguishes Jewish Palestine from her neighbours.

Of grumbling there is plenty, and it takes on a peculiar form. Jews who have come here because the articulate centre of Jewry—Israel—knew danger to their very existence to be imminent, Jews who have left behind them a life of moral enslavement, economic discrimination and social degradation—these are the elements among whom most grumbling, most crying after the flesh pots of Egypt and other kindred countries can be heard.

They demonstrate, they clamour, often with justification, because Israel's heart is bigger than her purse, and it is clear that housing, even of the most primitive kind, must lag, for months if not years, pitifully behind minimum requirements. But the young Jews who have come here since the establishment of the State of Israel, out of choice, from comfortable homes, where anti-Semitism is far from persecution—these do not grumble; they feel the exhilarating sense of future which astounds every objective visitor, whether Jew or Gentile, to this country. Such are David and Chava.

I met them immediately after their arrival in Israel, fresh from the material comforts of the United States, where David had studied music and Chava was a graduate in archaeology from one of American universities. They had no money, not a penny, although they had brought with them some wedding gifts and the wire recorder on which David recorded his compositions, and the excellent camera Chava had used while doing field work in archaeology. They also had a tiny refrigerator, the most modest wireless set possible—and enough courage to try to make the grade. They arrived here in the early Spring of 1950, and immediately went to a residential course in Hebrew. This solved their housing problem for six months, during which they searched around and found nothing.

After they had completed their course, during which David, who had had something of a Jewish upbringing, acquired a rudimentary knowledge of Hebrew, while Chava, who was of mixed parentage and had no Jewish background, learned amusingly little, they found a disused wash-house in the garden of an abandoned house in Katamon, and were allowed to do something with the four windowless and doorless walls, leaking roof and rudimentary flooring. They "moved in." I lost track of them for many months, and it was only last week that they called to see me and asked me to visit them before they were evicted from their house.

I went, accompanied by a native of Kensington, herself a newcomer to Israel. The wash-house measured about eight paces by six, and, being distempered while on the outside, was called "The White House." The young couple had themselves put in the primitive plumbing, cut the windows in the walls and made the window frames. Everything was gaily painted, and the cheap curtaining was embroidered with bright designs. The dining-table was two suitcases and a board which served, when not in use as a table-top, as a blind over the window. A cloth embroidered by Chava was on the table, and the vase of flowers on the table stood on a mat made of pine needles and coloured rafia. The rest of the furniture was home-made out of packing-cases, some covered with sacking embroidered with bright applique designs. In a place of honour was the organ, which David had bought for thirty shillings in a second-hand market, taken to pieces and reassembled. On it, he played Bach to us that morning.

David is 29 and Chava 27, so they ought to know what they want from life. Chava's parents are very wealthy and are anxious, at the shortest notice, to send them their tickets back home. I asked them whether they regretted their coming to Israel, whether they ever intended to return to America, where everything is available for the paying? There was no aim, no delight, no fun in life in the States. There was no sense of to-morrow, of the future; no obstacles to overcome, therefore no sense of achievement.

Their only worry was that they had been told that the nearby school needed their wash-house as an extra class-room, and they had no idea where they would go from their present home, which they, having built it plank by plank, loved as an artist the fruit of his labours. I told them to refuse to move until they had alternative accommodation and to continue doing the gardening — the service they rendered in return for their right to turn a wash-house into a home, so that it could never be said that they had not paid rent.

I had been impressed by the complete absence of panic about the possibility of being roofless again; they were not unduly worried, not even duly worried, I would have said. But when I told them everything possible would be done to get them a two-roomed flat among the many new immigrants from the West who are coming here to-day, they suddenly looked really panic-stricken. Where, Chava asked, would they get timber out of which they could make enough furniture for two rooms? So few people were arriving here from countries which permitted them to bring their furniture and personal effects that packing-cases and crates were scarce and hard to come by!

Returning home, I asked myself what it was that brought these youngsters here, and what it is that is keeping them here. Had they been Europeans, I might have understood it better, for throughout Europe, and especially in England, there is a perplexed sense of defeat. But they were American, and the perplexities of Europe played no part in their background. I recalled that a Labour Member in the Knesset said recently that Zionism is simply rejection by the Jews of the status of the Jew in Dispersion.

Was it that which brought David and Chava here and gave them the courage to overcome difficulties of this kind? But neither had ever been a member of a Zion-

DAUGHTER OF BEN-GURION TO TOUR U.S.

Renana Ben-Gurion, twenty-six, youngest daughter of Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, of Israel, arrived at Idlewild Airport, in New York from Lydda, Israel, for a two-month speaking tour under the auspices of Hadassah, Women's Zionist Organization of America. A junior officer in Israel's army, she served during the Arab war and fought through the siege of Jerusalem.

On her nation-wide tour, Miss Ben-Gurion will discuss "Israel through the eyes of its youth." She said this would be her first experience in public speaking and that her appearances would be confined to Hadassah groups.

Miss Ben-Gurion was unable to say what she wanted to see while in America but she expressed appreciation for the aid Americans are giving Israel. They are "doing wonderfully well in their aid to Israel, but, of course, more can be done and I hope it will be," she said. She speaks English well. Miss Ben-Gurion is stopping at the Empire Hotel, Broadway and Sixty-third Street, while in New York.

The shock of retiring from a fully occupied life to one of idleness often proves too much of a shock. Before retiring, hobbies should be planned, to keep hands and mind busy. The public library will supply books on suggestions and instruction in handicraft, studies or hobbies.

MARRIAGES

KAPLAN-BIRENBAUM

The marriage of Miss Jean (Chaine) Birenbaum, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Birenbaum, 5240 Jeanne Mance Street, to Herbert Kaplan, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Kaplan, of Flushing, New York, took place on December 31, 1951, at Beth David Synagogue, at half-past twelve o'clock. Rabbi Isaac Teicher and Cantor Joshua Dlin officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was gowned in blue and white taffeta, net, and lace, fashioned with a standing collar, long sleeves coming to points at the wrists, a draped bodice, and overskirts of blue and white taffeta, net, and lace. She had a Dutch cap, draped with a finger-tip veil of tulle illusion, and carried a white Bible, with purple orchids and white streamers. Miss Bessie Birenbaum, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, wore a floor-length strapless gown of yellow lace over net and green taffeta, with a small jacket; also a Dutch cap, and carried American Beauty roses. Chaine and Marilyn Birenbaum, nieces of the bride, as flower girls, wore green taffeta and yellow net floor-length dresses, with little matching bonnets of net over taffeta, and yellow net gloves, and carried nosegays with matching ribbon. Sam. Goldstein, brother-in-law of the groom, of Flushing, was best man. The ushers were: Stanley Drucker, C. Kalmanasch, Ben. Weinstock, Israel Parkovnick, brother-in-law of the bride; David and Louis Birenbaum, brothers of the bride. There was a choir. "Because" was sung. Chrysanthemums, pompoms, and carnations in various colours decorated the synagogue. Mrs. Birenbaum, mother of the bride, received in a royal-blue Chantilly lace gown, with matching hat, and a corsage of purple orchid; with Mrs. Kaplan, mother of the groom, in a gown of cinnamon-coloured embroidered lace over matching taffeta, with hat to match, and a purple orchid corsage. The bride and groom left to spend their honeymoon in the Catskill Mountains, the bride travelling in a brown tweed suit, with matching hat, and brown accessories. They will live in Flushing. Mr. and Mrs. S. Goldstein, brother-in-law and sister of the groom; Mrs. I. Miller, cousin of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. L. Ginsberg, Bernard Wurtzel, and Larry Tichtic, all of Flushing; and Mrs. M. Levin, aunt of the groom, of Milwaukee, Wis., were wedding guests.

GUTTERMAN-KLEINBERG

The marriage of Lila, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kleinberg, Van Horne Avenue, to Bernard Lewis Gutterman, son of Mrs. Hyman Gutterman, St. Urbain Street, and the late H. Gutterman, took place at half-past five o'clock on Sunday, December 16, at Adath Israel Synagogue. Rabbi Charles Bender, Cantor E. Goldberger, and Reverend M. Mandelcorn officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of white slipper satin, made with a stand-up collar, long, tight sleeves, coming to points at the wrists, a tight-fitted bodice, and a very full skirt draped on both sides, over a crinoline skirt, and ending in a very long train. The collar and bodice were embroidered with seed pearl and other beads. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion fell from a cap similarly embroidered in beads, and she carried a Bible decorated with white orchids and white satin streamers tied with stephanotis. Miss Myrna Kleinberg, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a floor-length strapless gown of pale pink net over taffeta made with a tight-fitting bodice and a very full skirt, trimmed with silver lace. She had a matching stole and headdress, silver lace mitts and pink satin slippers, and carried a sheaf of Talisman roses. Irving Gutterman, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Seymour Kleinberg, brother of the bride; Ralph Kleinberg, Edgar Leibovitch, Mortimer Leibovitch, cousins of the bride; Joe Gutterman, brother of the groom; Bernard Fatherman, Sydney Taveroff, cousins of the groom; and Irwin Schaffer. White carnations, snapdragons, gladioli, and palms were combined as decoration, and the aisles were marked with candles in tall white candelabra, and white satin ribbon. Mrs. Kleinberg, mother of the bride, received, in a cinnamon-colored gown of lace and chiffon, over peach-coloured taffeta, a gold metallic hat, gold slippers, and a corsage of a mauve orchid; with Mrs. H. Gutterman, mother of the groom, wearing a royal-blue lace gown with beading on the neckline, and a matching blue hat, and a shoulder corsage of a mauve orchid. Mrs. A. Fox, grandmother of the bride, wore a dinner gown of black crepe, with gold beading on the neckline, and side draping on the skirt, and a shoulder corsage of Talisman roses. The couple left by motor for Miami Beach, Florida, the bride travelling in a beige wool dress, trimmed with green velvet, brown snakeskin shoes, with matching bag, and a sheared beaver coat. They will reside at 5823 Decelles Avenue.

KLAYMAN-ULINE

The marriage of Miss Sophie Uline, daughter of Mrs. Gertrude Uline, Casgrain Street, and the late P. Uline, to Joseph Klayman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Klayman, of New York, took place at four o'clock, on Sunday, December 30, at the Empire Hotel, in New York. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Max Uline, Plamondon Avenue, Montreal. The bride and groom spent their honeymoon in Miami Beach, Florida. They are living at Tom's River, New Jersey. Mrs. Gertrude Uline and Max Uline, mother, and brother of the bride, were present at the wedding.

BENJAMIN-COSSMAN

The marriage of Fannie, daughter of David Cossman, 4520 Wilson Avenue, and the late Mrs. Chashel Cossman, to Hyman Benjamin, of Buffalo, N. Y., took place at the bride's home, on December 12. Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen officiated. The couple will reside in Buffalo.

ist organization, neither had known what Zionism stood for. No, I think all these simple explanations are too subjective and fail to offer a reasonable explanation. I think whatever answer can be found must be sought in a wider conception of history.

It is my conviction that Israel's emergence, her messianic drive to reshape her people and give them normality and zest for living, her fight to establish democratic government and a democratic way of life in the squalor of Middle Eastern feudalism—all these will be recorded in history as the one positive energising phenomenon in a century of ideological war, destruction and defeatism.

New Exhibit Is On View At Jewish Museum

The Jewish Museum of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, located in the former home of Mr. and Mrs. Felix M. Warburg, 1109 Fifth Avenue, New York City, has a new exhibit on view during the winter months. The exhibit features ceremonial objects of pewter, manuscripts, books, textiles and synagogue pieces from the H. G. Friedman collection; paintings by the 19th century French artist, Edouard Moyse, on loan from the collection of Max Cottin, New York business man; and stained glass panels, antique furniture, and paintings recently donated to the Museum by the daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Lamport in memory of their parents.

The pewter pieces, of which the Museum has the largest collection in the world, are of particular interest. The present display, selected from the more than 600 pieces belonging to the Jewish Museum, includes marriage, Seder, and Purim plates, as well as other objects associated with observance in the Jewish home. The casting of most of these objects predates by up to a century the chasing and decoration which sets them aside for their specific purpose.

The reason for this lies in the fact that Jews were barred from membership in the metal workers guilds all through Europe from the early midlle ages up to the 19th century. It was therefore customary for Jewish craftsmen to procure plain plates in soft metals, and to engrave them with suitable decorations and inscriptions, either for their personal use or on commission. This ban on Jewish metal workers, combined with the availability and malleability of the metal helps to explain the widespread use of pewter in earlier times, and its virtual disappearance from household use today.

Among the oriental textiles on display is a Torah curtain from the Near East, loaned by the Smithsonian Institution, where it was first displayed just 50 years ago. There are also some beautifully executed marriage contracts, colorfully illustrated, and with texts written in Arabic as well as in Hebrew.

Remaining on exhibit on the upper floors of the Museum are displays relating to the Torah which include: Torah arks, veils, scrolls, crowns, headpieces, breastplates, and pointers. A special synagogue room exhibits new and traditional forms in synagogue buildings. Another room is dedicated to ancient Israel, and modern Israeli art objects and other displays are built around the theme of Jewish art in Jewish life.

The exhibit in the Junior Gallery of the Museum, "The World of Isaac Loeb Peretz" continues on display through January. Commemorating the centennial of the famous Yiddish author, this exhibit is designed to give children the flavor of the Eastern European Jewish community at the turn of the century and offers opportunities for the very young to touch and to do as well as to look. The Jewish Museum is open Mondays through Thursdays from 3 to 5 P. M. and Sundays from 11 A. M. to 6 P. M. Admission is free at all times.

Mother Of Three Boys Will Finish College At 50

Mrs. Edythe Lutzker, 47 years old, the mother of three boys, is probably the oldest student ever to attend the day session of City College's School of Liberal Arts. A sophomore majoring in history, Mrs. Lutzker will be graduated in June, 1954—the month of her thirtieth wedding anniversary and her fiftieth birthday.

"All my life I've had to postpone going to college," explained Mrs. Lutzker, a small, vivacious woman. "I've always felt a very great need to fill the wide gaps in my knowledge, but the problems that arise when a working woman brings up children forced me to put it off." Mrs. Lutzker is a graduate of Julia Richman High School, class of '22.

Maintaining a perfect attendance record since entering the college in September 1950, the enthusiastic Mrs. Lutzker differs from her classmates in preferring two-hour classes to the customary single-hour ones. "I just live when I come to school," she declared. "There is nothing more terrible than holidays."

Mrs. Lutzker's husband, Philip, is engaged in sales promotion work for hand laundries. Her eldest son, Michael, is 22 years old and a senior at Brooklyn College. The two other boys, Arthur, 14, and Paul, 11, attend—Joan of Arc Junior High School and Public School 186.

The only difficulty the 47-year-old mother and student encounters, besides accustoming herself once again to the learning process, is her inability to learn how to swim "with the rest of the girls" in her hygiene class. Mrs. Lutzker is "heartbroken about it because my kids make fun of me."

On the whole, however, she finds that her family is taking her college education wonderfully. "My children and husband get a lot of enjoyment out of my going to school," she said. Cooperation of the family in such a project is indispensable, Mrs. Lutzker believes, says the New York Times.

Firm in the belief that it is just as important to express your opinion in school as it is in local government, Mrs. Lutzker ran for Student Council, the college student governing body, as representative of her class. "If you accept privileges," Mrs. Lutzker theorizes, "you must accept responsibilities." Without campaigning, the housewife-mother-student was one of six who won the position.

Mrs. Lutzker hopes to continue her long-delayed education by attending law school. She would like to become an expert on labor legislation as it affects the woman worker. Her address is 201 West Eighty-ninth Street, Manhattan.

Two years ago, encouraged by her husband and sons, she decided to go back to school. Taking an intensive pre-college program, Mrs. Lutzker, who had taken a commercial course in high school, successfully completed the equivalent of two years of mathematics, two years of science, three years of language and a year of history within a period of ten months, says the New York Herald Tribune. She passed the Regents' examinations and was accepted by City College.

Although classes and homework take up a lot of time, Mrs. Lutzker, who lives at 201 W. 89th St., believes that returning to school has brought her closer to her family. "We often help one another," she says, "and discuss the problems we encounter in class. Of course Michael is an upper classman at Brooklyn College, and his work is more advanced than mine, but helping me is like a refresher course for him."

In her spare moments, Mrs. Lutzker has been active as president of the Child Care Center Parents Association of New York, an organization she helped found in 1945 and has headed since. The group advocates continuance of the city and state plans for care centers for the children of working parents.

Mrs. Lutzker says: "The more mature a person becomes, the more fully he realizes the value of an education."

The hands are in constant contact with dirt and bacteria and should be thoroughly washed before handling food or dishes.

The appearance of Volume 2, 1951, of The Hebrew Medical Journal (Harofé Haivri) concludes the 24th year of its publication under the editorship of Dr. Moses Einhorn. It contains a treatise by Dr. Zussmann Muntner, of Jerusalem, dealing with Persian medicine and its relation to Jewish and other medical science; an article by Dr. Y. Leiboviz, of Israel, on the life and work of the great physician and philosopher, "Zacutus Lusitanus"; by Dr. Henry R. Gold, a discussion on "The Jewish Contribution to the Development of Medical Psychology"; and a symposium on present health conditions in Israel. The editorial office is at 932 Park Avenue, New York 28, N. Y.

CLASS IN COOKERY

SODA BISCUIT KNISHES

one-quarter pound liver
two large onions
two hard boiled eggs
one-half teaspoon salt
one-quarter teaspoon pepper soda biscuits
two or three eggs
one-quarter cup cold water

Fry onions in oil or chicken fat until soft. Cut liver into medium-sized pieces, and fry with onions until both are done. Chop liver mixture with hard boiled eggs, very fine, add salt and pepper. Place portion of mixture between two soda biscuits and continue. Beat two or three eggs, add cold water, mix well, and dip each sandwich into egg mixture. Fry in chicken fat or oil until brown.

Mrs. William Goldstein,
330 Clinton Street, Toronto.

HOT SPICE SPAGHETTI SAUCE

Fry a sliced onion with a whole clove of sliced garlic. Spice this with red chile pepper, paprika, salt and pepper. Add two tablespoons fat and fry until soft, but not brown. Remove to a larger saucepan; add one twenty-ounce tin of tomato juice, and bring to a boil. Take one-half cup of the sauce, and add about one-quarter cup flour to it, to make a thick paste. When this is thoroughly mixed, and there are no lumps, add it slowly to rest of simmering sauce, stirring constantly. Bring this to a boil, cooking it for fifteen or twenty minutes. Strain this sauce if desired. Pour it over cooked spaghetti.

SEES ROLE FOR ARAB LEAGUE AS BAD FOR ISRAEL

A warning that "otherwise praiseworthy" attempts to ease the Middle Eastern tension, under discussion in American-British meetings in Washington, may endanger Israel's security has been made by Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, director of the International Affairs Department of the World Jewish Congress. Dr. Perlzweig, who is also the WJC consultant to the United Nations, charged that a number of American officials, in the course of top-level conversations on means to break the Anglo-Egyptian deadlock and provide for Middle Eastern defense, had proposed that "the Arab League as such be given a role in the Middle Eastern defence set-up."

Such a scheme, which would give the Arab League a new lease on life as a military factor, might make Israel "one of the casualties of the cold war," Dr. Perlzweig said in addressing a forum series on "America And Israel" at the Stephen Wise Free Synagogue, 30 West 68th Street, New York. The plan would inevitably mean that the Arab states, still hostile to Israel, would receive heavy armor and that their troops would be trained by Western experts, he declared, warning: "Any such scheme, so long as the Arab states refuse to establish a firm and equitable peace with Israel, would mean a fatal blow to security in an area of sensitive strategic importance instead of a buttressing of the forces of peace. I am confident that neither President Truman nor Prime Minister Churchill, both of whom have in their time shown themselves to be understanding friends of Israel and the Jewish people, will allow any such policy to be adopted if they are alerted to its dangers."

The WJC official also criticized the proposal that King Farouk of Egypt be recognized as the King of Sudan as well. Pointing out that the British are pledged to give the Sudanese the right to indicate their future political status by a plebiscite within the next year, Dr. Perlzweig said: "The Sudan has made considerable strides both economically and politically during the past few years, and this has been possible because the British administration, whatever else may be said about it, is completely free of corruption. To hand the Sudanese over to the tender mercies of Egyptian imperialism would hardly be an improvement over a British colonial administration."

The chair of Yiddish literature, established at the Hebrew University by the Jewish National Workers Alliance of the United States, was inaugurated. Dov Sedan, newly-appointed lecturer, spoke on "Yiddish In Bialik's Creative World". It was Bialik's belief, at different periods in his literary career, that Yiddish was, as well as a supplementary language and an historical necessity, an excellent means in the preserving and reviving of Hebrew as the national language of Jews everywhere. Not only did he make many translations from and into Yiddish, but he also wrote a number of works in this language. The Hebrew University plans to include in its curriculum courses in all dialects spoken by Jews in various parts of the world. If a suitable teacher can be found and funds are available, instruction and research in Ladina (the Judeo-Spanish dialect) will be instituted.

Books Show Expansion Of Hebrew

The expansion of the Hebrew language to keep pace with modern technology, as well as contemporary arts and letters, is illustrated in an exhibition of Hebrew books published in Israel, which opened earlier this month, at the Jewish Museum, 92nd Street and Fifth Avenue, New York. The exhibit represents the first extensive showing in the United States of the products of the new Israel publishing industry. The books on display, issued by the Bialik Institute of Jerusalem, a non-profit Foundation supported by the Jewish Agency for Palestine, range from Hebrew translations of Dante, Shakespeare, James Truslow Adams and Goethe, to dictionaries of terms used in gymnastics, technology, the modern kitchen, and other specialized fields unknown to the ancient Hebrews.

"As a Foundation of the Jewish Agency," Moshe Gordon, Director of the Bialik Institute, said at a press preview of the exhibit, "the Bialik Institute is dedicated to advancing Hebrew as a modern language and at the same time maintaining the rich Jewish literary traditions of the past. It was founded in 1935 to implement a program laid out by the great Hebrew poet, Chaim Bialik, who during the early years of Jewish settlement in Palestine was audacious enough to fight for the rebirth of Hebrew culture at a time when Arab enmity and a harsh physical environment combined to make mere existence in Palestine a perilous undertaking. In this sense Bialik, and the Institute which bears his name, have done for Hebrew culture what other great Zionist leaders have done and are doing for Jewish nationhood.

"More than 30,000 new Hebrew words and expressions have come into use in the last half century," Mr. Gordon continued, "but the job is just beginning. It must be remembered that when Hebrew was last spoken by a whole people the world moved on camels and horses. Today Israelis must speak and write about steamships, railroads and jet planes, not to mention radar, atomic energy and inter-planetary rockets.

"The Israel publishing industry faces special handicaps not easily overcome. The first is a shortage of paper, which, though not large in an absolute sense, nevertheless presents a continuing drag on our production. An idea of how moderate our needs are can be gleaned from the fact that the paper needed for, say, two editions of any of the great American national weeklies, would suffice for Israel's book production for an entire year.

"Our second handicap," Mr. Gordon said, "is the smallness of our Hebrew-reading public. Of the million and a quarter Jews in Israel, more than half have come in the last three years and know little Hebrew. It is doubtful whether today there are more than 400,000 Israelis in the country who are habitual Hebrew readers. Of these, at least one-third are under twenty and, as a whole, cannot be considered a market for serious scientific and literary work.

"But what the Israeli readers lack in numbers they more than make up in voracity. So esoteric a title as 'The Historical Geography of Palestine' sold 2200 copies in Israel, at the equivalent of $6.75 per copy. Taking into consideration the limited adult Hebrew-reading market in Israel, this is the equivalent of a sale of more than 1,000,000 copies in the United States. It is this hunger for good reading," Mr. Gordon concluded, "that is making it possible for the Bialik Institute and for other Israeli publishers to sell successfully, the classics of Hebrew literature, Germany "an act of tyranny" and "there are times when a people are justified in rising against tyranny and opposing it by force." This view, he added, in no way diminished his devotion to the principles of parliamentary democracy.

If he should be obliged to resort to violence Mr. Begin emphasized that violence would not be directed against persons. Mr. Ben-Gurion's suggestion in a speech that Mr. Begin had threatened to assassinate members of the Government and, in particular, the Prime Minister himself, was, he declared, the "voice of his guilty conscience."

Mr. Begin concluded that there was, none the less, one way in which Jews could honorably take money or goods from Germans, says the New York Times. "This would be as if it were a levy imposed by a superior authority, by an international court, or by the occupying power without any negotiations on our part."

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

Ever since man first saw the light of day he has had to contend with loneliness. Thus the Bible records that this very problem faced Adam and out of sheer pity God said: "It is not good that a man should live alone", and therefore woman was created to be his companion.

Psychologists maintain that the very first cry of the infant babe as it emerges from its mother's womb is that of disappointment and loneliness. The very hunger of the child for affection is due to loneliness. With adolescence there is an intensification in the search for comradeship. This stage of the sorority and fraternity and the club is important.

As maturity dawns a far deeper loneliness overtakes us. We therefore seek a mate who will accompany us on our earthly pilgrimage and through whom we hope to find significance in our own being. And so we marry. But marriage does not guarantee companionship unless there is constant consecration to each other by those who have vowed to unite fate and fortune, for within marriage itself loneliness is often found.

We see some men so absorbed in their business or professions that the art of married companionship is soon lost and the result is estrangement between two who but recently plighted their love. What is true in this respect of men may be equally true of women, who, absorbed in the social swing, neglect often to cultivate the skilful art of husband-wife companionship.

The quest to conquer loneliness today is a more difficult one than ever. When we dwelt in small communities we had every manner of friend. We had to be friendly. But today, living as most of us do in metropolitan centres in huge apartment houses, we are only modern cliff-dwellers. We do not know even our next door apartment neighbour. And, though we may dwell in a city of a million inhabitants, we can be as though alone in a desert.

Of course, there are two aspects to the problem of loneliness. Solitude has its virtues and solitude has also its faults. For one thing, to undergo growth of soul it is most essential that we have opportunities for solitude. If we are to gain inner strength we must escape from the hurly-burly of the multitude. What the Jewish mystics called "Cheshbon Hanefesh," "soul-stock-taking" is most essential. We must meet ourselves by communing with ourselves.

There are those who find it unpleasant to practice "soul-stock-taking" for they fear to live with their own conscience. But they who think noble thoughts are never alone. To attain the heights of religion, solitude is most necessary. In that way is the spirit fed. For the imagination to grow, solitude is also essential. The poet, the orator, the scientist and thinker can only create through quietude and being alone. This is the testimony of history. Moses came on holy ground when alone in the wilderness.

Alas, the peace of mind which multitudes today seek can not be found because they fail to withdraw from the crowd and the world of terrifying noise and because they have no appreciation for solitude and meditation, and of course, prayer and personal communion with God. Man is a gregarious animal. He seeks fellowship. And the loneliness which he should seek to escape is that which tends to isolation. How then can we conquer that which isolates us from fellow man? Simply by showing consideration for others sincerely. He who practices consideration for others will never be alone. He will always know the joy of friendship.

It is self-love that brings loneliness. The psychologists point out that he who is afflicted with the "narcissus complex" will ever remain in tragic loneliness and all the material possession that he may have will give him not even a single sincere friend. But he who knows the art of self-forgetting, thrice blessed is he. He will love people and people will love him. The one enemy of loneliness is love.

To have friends you must learn to be a friend. He who walks about the world with a frozen face cannot hope to win the affection of people. Long ago the talmudic sage warned: "Receive all men with a cheerful countenance." They also who identify themselves with causes for human betterment are bound to conquer loneliness. They are thus lifted above the petty self and belong to a great companionship.

Above all, you who feel the power of God wherever you may be in desert waste or in the pushing crowd, you are never alone. With the ancient Psalmist you can joyfully proclaim:

"Thou hast put gladness in my heart . . .
In peace will I both lay me down and sleep;
For Thou, Lord, makest me dwell alone in safety."

PREMIER DUPLESSIS DISSOCIATES POLICY FROM MINISTER'S SLUR

Premier Maurice Duplessis told the Canadian Jewish Congress that an anti-Jewish statement by the Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. Laurent Barre "does not represent the policy of the Government of Quebec and, needless to say, of the actual Prime Minister of the Province. The Province of Quebec is traditionally just and fair to the minorities and the present Government and the actual Prime Minister of Quebec will always be inspired by these sound and unsurpassed traditions." Mr. Duplessis made this statement in a letter to Saul Hayes, national executive director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, in reply to a telegram of protest against the Minister of Agriculture who was quoted in press reports as saying that he preferred to buy at a good price rather "than to buy at a bargain price from a Jew." The Congress had stated that the expression of Mr. Barre's anti-Semitic views in a Canadian Legislature is of great disservice to the Prime Minister and to those who desire to build a pleasant life of neighborliness and goodwill in our own Province.

ARABS GET

proposed to enlarge the commission to seven members. The alliance of various Latin American and Asian delegations with the Arabs provided a majority to push these changes through.

Pakistan proposed that the United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission be enlarged from four to seven members and be clearly given the task of implementing the General Assembly resolutions of 1948 and 1950.

The Commission's most recent proposal up to January 11 provided for the repatriation of Arab refugees to Israel only within the capacity of that country to absorb them. The proposal also passed over the question of internationalizing Jerusalem, now Israel's seat of government.

The 1948 resolution cited by Pakistan asked the Commission to seek Jerusalem's internationalization and the repatriation of all Arabs who wanted to go back to Israel, says the New York Times.

The Pakistan plan would also empower the Commission's refugee office, created by the 1950 resolution, to collect blocked accounts, rents and "other rights" in Israel of Arab refugees and pay them to refugees who did not wish to return.

The Pakistan plan was understood to have been drafted in consultation with Arab states. The Western proposal, sponsored by Britain, France, Turkey and the United States, was amended on January 11 by Canada to permit the commission to close its Jerusalem office at its own discretion. The original text would have made continuation of that office mandatory.

The text approved provides that the four additional members of the Commission shall be named by the Assembly before the end of its current session. The reference to refugees would have the Assembly "note with regret" that an earlier Assembly resolution had not been fulfilled.

The resolution says this is particularly the case "with regard to the repatriation of refugees wishing to return to their homes and also with regard to the just and equitable evaluation of and compensation for the properties of those not wishing to return."

Israel has told the Committee that such unlimited return of refugees (as provided for in a 1948 resolution of the Assembly) would swamp Israel's economy and threaten the country with a potential fifth column. Another passage injected into the resolution "urges the Governments concerned strictly to observe the resolution of the General Assembly."

The United Nations estimates that there are 1,000,000 Palestine refugees in the Middle East, of whom 800,000 would be "virtually destitute" except for United Nations relief. Israel has offered to pay a lump sum as compensation to these refugees for property lost in Israel, but this proposal is not acceptable to the Arab states, reports the New York Times.
